A directory of United Kingdom (UK) organizations and centers that provide services of interest to language teachers and researchers is presented. The organizations are associations and societies that are concerned with language, linguistics, language teaching and research, and the most important groups concerned with educational technology and reading skills in general. The organizations and centers are concerned specifically with the teaching of the five principal foreign languages taught in UK schools (French, German, Italian, Russian, and Spanish), as well as the most important groups concerned with the teaching of English as a second or foreign language). Also included are embassies, cultural institutes, and tourist offices in the UK that provide information and/or materials suitable for cultural and background studies related to the five main languages. Finally, the directory includes the most important European and international associations and centers abroad concerned with language teaching and research in general and, in particular, with the teaching of the five main languages. Excluded are national language teacher associations in individual countries abroad. The first of the two main sections of the directory, an alphabetical list of organizations, provides a description of each organization including address and telephone number, a list of publications and ordering information, and a contact persons. The second main section, a bibliography, includes other published directories and sources of reference. Also provided are an organization index, index of abbreviations and acronyms, index of publications, and a subject index. (SW)

Introduction

This directory gives details of the aims, activities and publications of organisations and centres with services of interest to language teachers and researchers.

It contains details of:

a) those associations and societies in the UK concerned with language, linguistics, language teaching and research as well as the most important of those concerned with educational technology and reading skills in general

b) those organisations and centres concerned specifically with the teaching of the five principal foreign languages taught in UK schools (French, German, Italian, Russian and Spanish) as well as the most important of those concerned with the teaching of English (principally as a second or foreign language)

c) those embassies, cultural institutes and tourist offices in the UK which provide information and/or materials suitable for cultural and background studies related to the five main languages listed above

d) the most important European and international associations and centres abroad concerned with language teaching and research in general and in particular with the teaching of the five main languages listed above. The directory does not, however, contain national associations of language teachers in individual countries abroad.

The directory is divided into two main sections:

1) ALPHABETICAL LIST OF ORGANISATIONS

This list describes the aims, scope and activities of each organisation, and provides the name of its correspondent(s), its address and telephone number and a list of its publications with information on how they can be obtained.

2) BIBLIOGRAPHY

The bibliography refers the reader to other published directories and sources of reference which lie outside the scope of this directory.

There are also four indexes:

a) Index of names of organisations listed in the main core of the directory

b) Index of abbreviations and acronyms by which many of the organisations and centres are commonly known

c) Index of publications which includes those newsletters, journals and annually-updated reference works mentioned as being published by the organisations listed in the main core of the directory

d) Subject index which refers the reader to the organisation(s) that can best help with the subject of his or her enquiry. Entries range from 'educational technology' to 'working holidays'.
